WHAT THEY SAY...

"Spice Drops are a super innovation. I love that 'just picked' taste and the way you can mix and blend without any of the traditional prep involved such as grinding or scraping. It gives me more time to play around with spice flavours. There will always be a place in my kitchen for fresh spices – but there's also space for these drops, too."

Antony Worrall Thompson - Chef

"These drops present us with a wonderfully simple and flexible way to blend spices and create flavours."

Cyrus Todiwala - TV chef and owner of landmark London restaurant café Spice Namasté

"A wonderfully versatile idea for chefs and cooks everywhere. Authentic and pure flavours from just a few drops."

Atul Kochhar - one of Britain's most critically acclaimed chefs and the first Indian chef to achieve a Michelin star

"This has a fantastic saffron flavour."

Tom Kerridge - Two Michelin starred chef

"Stop what you're doing folks! Got to tell you about these spice drops from @holylamanaturals. They make dried ground spices seem so fusty and dusty by comparison. Am bowled over!"

THREE GENERATION FAMILY BUSINESS WITH AN ETHICAL VISION

Here's the story of three generations of a passionate family business based in Kerala. It all started with Dattatreya Deo back in the 1940s and who was a pioneer in the essential oils and perfumery industry in India. His youngest son, Vijay, a keen chemist, followed closely in his footsteps as the business expanded into spice extraction.

Being a passionate agriculturalist at heart, Vijay lived in Bhutan for eight years. Inspired by his experiences there, in 2000, the Holy Lama Naturals brand was created and a women's enterprise was set up by Vijay, spearheaded by his wife, Vijaya. The factory makes amazing natural products with the support of the women in the community.

In 2013, Gouri, their eldest daughter, left behind her accounting career with Deloitte and launched the Holy Lama business in the UK with the Spice Drops® range.

The factory being located in Kerala, the land of Spices, ensures a steady supply of the best quality spices and herbs. The extraction is close to the source and so the spices are oh so very fresh!

A SOCIALLY RESPONSIBLE BUSINESS

The factory operates on the 10 principles of fair trade.

A government recognized women's enterprise with more than 80% women, mostly from disadvantaged backgrounds.

Transparent supply chain with over seven decades of strong relationships with farmers and suppliers.

No child labour.

Fair pay and good working conditions ensures happy employees and low labour turnover.

Sustainable business model with less than 1% wastage in production.
